The Welcome Tax, Explained

Quebec land transfer duties – calculation, deadline and special cases

“Welcome tax”: a nice name for a bill that surprises many buyers a few weeks after moving in. In reality, these are real estate transfer taxes, a very real municipal tax that must be anticipated from the start.

This guide explains where this tax comes from, on what value it is calculated, how the brackets work (including the upper brackets specific to Montreal), the main cases of exemption, and above all how to budget for it so that you are never caught off guard.

2026 edition note: provincial bracket thresholds are indexed each year and some municipalities add their own brackets. The amounts below are indicative - always validate the scale in effect for your city and the year of your purchase.

“Welcome tax”: the nickname is ironic, but the bill is very real. This guide explains where this tax comes from, what value it is calculated on, how to read the progressive scale, and when to pay it - so that it is not a surprise.

The thresholds and rates (2026 edition) are indexed and vary depending on the municipality: use this guide to understand the mechanism, then validate the exact amount with your notary.

CHAPTER

Where does this tax come from?

Understand the nature and purpose of transfer taxes.

Real estate transfer taxes are a tax collected by the municipality each time a building changes ownership. The nickname “welcome tax” comes from the name of a former minister (Jean Bienvenue), and not from a welcome gift - despite what the name suggests.

This tax finances municipal services. It is due only once, at the time of the transaction, by the buyer. Almost all municipalities in Quebec collect it.

This tax is not a “trap”: it is an important source of revenue for municipalities, levied only once, upon purchase. Knowing it in advance avoids unpleasant surprises, because it can represent several thousand dollars depending on the price of the property.

EMILIE'S ADVICE

Don't be fooled by the name: it's not optional and it's not symbolic. On an average priced property, the bill often reaches several thousand dollars.

CHAPTER

What value is this calculated on?

Know which value serves as a basis for the calculation.

The tax is calculated on the higher of two values: the price paid for the property, or the municipal assessment adjusted by a “comparative factor” (a coefficient that the municipality applies to bring the assessment roll closer to the market value).

In other words, if you pay more than the adjusted municipal assessment, the tax is based on your purchase price; otherwise, on the adjusted valuation. We cannot therefore “reduce” the tax by underdeclaring the price.

Remember the key rule: the rate is applied to the HIGHER of the two values - price paid or adjusted municipal assessment. In other words, paying “under assessment” does not reduce the tax below that adjusted assessment. This is often what explains a higher amount than expected.

EMILIE'S ADVICE

Before buying, ask your broker for the municipal assessment and the comparative factor of the target city. We can thus estimate the tax in advance, to the nearest dollar or almost.

CHAPTER

Calculation by installments

Apply the progressive scale, including the Montreal brackets.

The tax is progressive: each portion of the value is taxed at an increasing rate. Basic provincial scale (2026 edition, indexed thresholds, to be validated):

- 0.5% on the first tranche (up to approximately $58,900).
- 1.0% on the next portion (up to approximately $294,600).
- 1.5% on the portion beyond.

The City of Montreal adds higher brackets for higher value properties (rates that climb above 1.5%, up to levels of 3% and more for high amounts). Other cities may also adjust their tiers.

Indicative example (excluding Montreal, property at $450,000)

- $0.5\% \times $58,900 \approx \295
- $1.0\% \times ($294,600 - $58,900) \approx $2,357$
- $1.5\% \times ($450,000 - $294,600) \approx $2,331$
- Approximate total: approximately $4,980 (to be validated depending on the city and year).

As the scale is progressive, only the portion of value in each bracket is taxed at the corresponding rate - a bit like income tax. Montreal adds higher brackets for high-value properties. Always have the amount estimated BEFORE you offer, to incorporate it into your closing budget.

EMILIE'S ADVICE

Always redo the calculation with the scale of YOUR city and the current year. In Montreal in particular, the higher brackets can significantly inflate the bill on an expensive property.

CHAPTER

Exemptions and special cases

Identify situations where the tax can be reduced, deferred or exempt.

The law provides for certain cases of exemption from transfer taxes, in particular several transfers between related persons. The rules are precise and evolve: they must be confirmed by the notary depending on your situation. Among the frequently discussed cases:

- Transfers between spouses (married, civil union, and in certain cases de facto spouses depending on the conditions).
- Direct line transfers (for example from a parent to a child), under conditions.
- Certain reorganizations or transfers involving related legal entities.

Please note: some municipalities also apply a “supplementary duty” (a small amount) even when the exemption applies. Never assume an exemption without validation.

The most common exemptions target transfers between related persons (spouses, direct ascendants/descendants), under specific conditions. They do not apply automatically: you often have to request them and document the link. Your notary is the right person to validate your eligibility.

EMILIE'S ADVICE

If your transaction involves the family (donation of property, repurchase from a loved one, transfer between spouses), speak to the notary EARLY: a poorly documented exemption may be refused.

CHAPTER

When and how to pay it (and plan for it)

Anticipate the deadline to avoid unpleasant surprises.

The tax is not paid to the notary at the time of purchase: the municipality sends a separate invoice, generally a few weeks to a few months after the transaction. It is precisely this gap that traps buyers - the bill often arrives once the budget has already been dented by the move and the first expenses.

Good habit

- Estimate the tax BEFORE purchasing, with the help of your broker.
- Set aside the amount in a separate account upon signing.
- Don't count on it for anything else: treat it as already spent.

Concretely, the invoice arrives by post a few weeks to a few months after the purchase, with a payment deadline. Put the amount aside as soon as the transaction takes place so as not to be caught off guard - this is one of the most common cash flow surprises for new owners.

EMILIE'S ADVICE

On the day of taking possession, immediately transfer the estimated amount of the welcome tax into a separate account. When the bill arrives, it's already paid in your head - and in your budget.

IN PRACTICE

Action plan

Your next steps, concretely.

This week

1. Obtain the municipal assessment and the comparative factor of the target city.
2. Estimate my welcome tax for my price range.

Within 30 days

1. Reserve the estimated amount in a separate account upon purchase.
2. Validate with the notary any possibility of exemption linked to my situation.

Then

1. Check the exact scale at the time of purchase, because the thresholds are indexed each year.

Before purchasing

1. Have my welcome tax estimated and added to my closing budget.
2. Check with the notary whether an exemption applies to my situation.
